Course Description

The hospitality industry makes a significant contribution to the national and global economy. Food and beverage establishments, which fall under the umbrella of the hospitality industry, have enjoyed increased exposure and success over the last few decades. This has led to an increased demand for skilled and knowledgeable staff to work and manage an array of business models. From hotel restaurants, bars and coffee shops, to food trucks, diners, drive-through's and pop-up restaurants. Working at a food and beverage establishment requires innovation, dedication and discipline.

Competent managerial staff who have operational experience and skill and the knowledge to manage food and beverage establishments, are in-demand globally. Students achieving this qualification, have the skills and experience, to work in food and beverage establishments and have the knowledge and confidence to manage such operations, and establishments.

Delivered as a distance learning programme, qualifying learners, through a combination of academic and work-integrated learning, acquire the necessary competencies required to fulfil roles in lower- or middle-management positions within the food and beverage industry.
